Thank You...

...for your interest in Agri-Pulse Communications, Inc., the most trusted and leading source for agriculture and rural policy news and analysis.

I've had a keen interest in agricultural policy going back to my days growing up on the farm in Iowa when my dad would invite our congressman over for dinner and dialogue. I continued to be engaged in covering farm policy issues throughout my career as a journalist.

Launched in 2004, today, "Agri-Pulse is the largest, most experienced ag policy news bureau, with offices in Washington, D.C., and Sacramento, CA." We reach the ag policy opinion leaders, key influencers and marketing executives across the U.S. and around the world who impact ag & food policy.

We hope you will also become a fan of our coverage and choose to use one of our products to help your organization communicate with Capitol Hill, government agencies, agribusiness executives, financial institutions, or the leadership of the top farm and commodity organizations.

Please feel free to contact me or any of our staff members.

Sincerely,

Who We Are...

Ag, Food & Rural Opinion Leaders

- Federal legislators & staff involved in agriculture, food & energy
- Governors and state ag department staff in all 50 States
- “C-Suite” & ag policy-minded executives in agri-business, farm retail/co-ops, energy & food industries
- Farmer leaders & staff serving farm commodity, marketing, promotion & trade organizations
- Ag, food & rural policy influencers across the U.S.

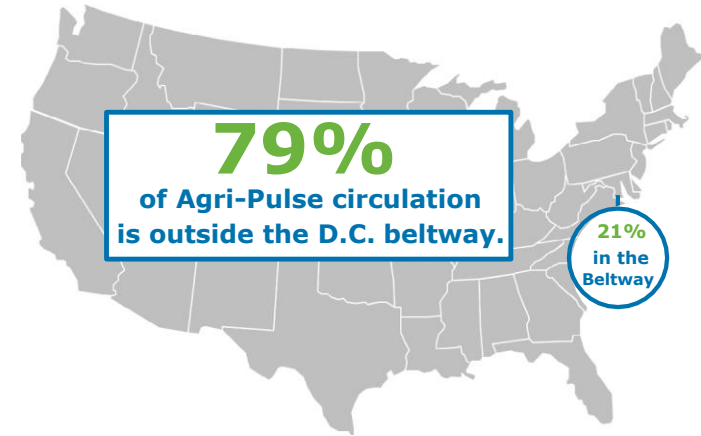

What We Do...

- Cover all policy aspects of the food, fuel, feed & fiber industries
- Inform our readers about ag policy decisions made in Washington D.C., Sacramento, CA and across the U.S. that impact their productivity, their businesses and their bottom line!
- Agri-Pulse is the largest, most experienced news bureau in the U.S. dedicated 100% to covering ag & food policy issues

Agri/Pulse Newsletter

Greetings,

Happy Wednesday, where we are watching congressional Democrats navigate a newer version of their $3.5 trillion Build Back Better package – trying to figure out what gets scaled back or eliminated. Senate Ag Committee Chairman Debbie Stabenow assured us that the bill would still “have something meaningful” when it comes to addressing climate-smart agriculture and forestry, even as the spending range now looks more like $1.9 trillion to $2.2 trillion.

In this week’s newsletter, we look at how funding from the Commodity Credit Corporation is increasingly being used to carry out policy priorities for this administration (and the last one, too). Philip Brasher talked to several insiders about how goals have changed over time and what key lawmakers are saying about how the CCC is being used.

For those of you interested in sustainability, especially as it relates to soybeans, I hope you’ll join us for a free webinar Thursday at 11 a.m. central time. You’ll hear from soy leaders representing the United Soybean Board, American Soybean Association and U.S. Soybean Export Council about how U.S. growers are responding to new expectations from international customers and what it might mean for future export opportunities. You can register by clicking here.

USDA's CCC takes on big role as presidents look to fund priorities

Successive presidents have ramped up use of a Depression-era tool, USDA's Commodity Credit Corp., to pour billions of dollars into their policy priorities with limited input from Congress. Republicans, who handcuffed Ag Secretary Tom Vilsack's use of the CCC for years, are less resistant now.

'Middle ground' on WOTUS elusive if not impossible

EPA Administrator Michael Regan has said repeatedly he wants to craft a “durable” definition of “waters of the United States” in the Clean Water Act – one informed by Supreme Court precedent and input from a variety of stakeholders.

USDA bets big on OIE to help protect US pork trade amid ASF fears

The U.S. is counting on an expensive campaign to protect nearby territories from African swine fever as well as international respect for the World Organization for Animal Health to protect American pork production and exports.

Virtual fencing allows producers flexibility for cattle grazing

It can be costly and time-consuming for ranchers to keep their cattle inside the pasture using just traditional and electric fencing, but researchers are looking into a possible virtual solution.

Democrats' rural troubles could be key to GOP midterm gains

Well into the 1990s, rural America was a political battleground. Democrat Bill Clinton won a plurality of the rural vote in that decade. But that is no longer the case, and rural voters are trending to heavily Republican this year that they could play a key role in giving the GOP control of Congress.

 The EPA could soon have more of its top leadership in place. The Senate Environment and Public Works Committee was to vote today on nominees for four assistant administrator positions: Michael Dunson, Chemical Safety and Pollution Prevention; William Wehrum, Air and Radiation; Matthew Leopold, General Counsel; and David Ross, Water. If approved, the nominees will still need confirmation by the full Senate.
Jim Gulliford is returning to the EPA as administrator for the agency's Region 7, which covers Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska. Most recently, Gulliford served as executive director of the Soil and Water Conservation Society, leading the organization from 2009-2016. Before that, Gulliford spent nearly a decade at EPA, rising to the position of assistant administrator for the Office of Prevention, Pesticides, and Toxic Substances.
 President Trump has picked AccuWeather CEO Barry Myers to lead the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. An attorney, Myers has headed up the weather-forecasting firm since 2007. Trump had earlier filled two deputy posts at NOAA: former Navy oceanographer Rear Adm. Timothy Gallaudet and Neil Jacobs, chief atmospheric scientist at Panasonic Avionics Corporation.
